

Primary Art

29th October 21 Planning and Leading a Primary Art Curriculum

Two half day sessions (Friday 29th October 1pm-4.15pm – Part 2 TBC) that will offer practical suggestions for planning and leading an outstanding art provision in a primary school setting. Learn ways to structure your art curriculum, to ensure good coverage of skills and knowledge, and provide your students with a rich creative experience. Gain ideas about how to select and use a broad and inclusive range of art, as an inspiration for your art lessons, artworks which enrich and extend your students' knowledge about what art is. Understand how assessment can form part of the creative process and be genuinely useful to your students as part of their art lessons.

Building a Culture of Creativity with Emily Gopal

This session will tackle teacher confidence, as a way of empowering art leaders, to plan art and design experiences that are dynamic and exciting - that meet and exceed national curriculum requirements. Explore ways that your students can be experimental, and explorative in their approaches and use their own ideas, experiences, and research to create art.

About Emily:

Emily Gopal is a freelance art education consultant, working within both the cultural and educational sector. Emily's work is multifaceted, and includes working with schools, teaching training providers and in collaboration with galleries and institutions. Her book Teaching Primary Art and Design was published by Bloomsbury in 2018, written to support primary art leaders in contextualising practical art activities, using art history and contemporary art practices.
